History of our town

Zlatoust was founded by Mosolov brothers in 1754 who build the ironworks here.

The city's name is derived from the Russian translation of Chrysostom, because it was founded near a church dedicated to that Saint. In the early 19th century, Pavel Anosov made the first Russian bulat steel blades in Zlatoust, which was granted the town status in 1865. The town is also known for the first Russian steel cannons.

The modern town

Today's Zlatoust is a large industrial center in South Urals. The city is a significant transport center. There is a modern railway station and a bus terminal. Zlatoust is the city of students. There are many colleges, technical schools, and the local branch of South Ural State University. The city can offer unique possibilities for holidaymakers. In winter you can try here mountain skiing and snowboarding. The services meet the demands of International Mountain Skiing and Snowboard Federation. There are 6 comfortable hotels in the city.
